9) a typhoon:

Sale of whiskey and soju rose during the first half of this year, whereas that of beer fall, according to sales records compiled yesterday by the alcoholic beverage industry. The sales volume of soju in first half of the year rose 7.7 percent compared to that of the same period last year, or from 40.95 million cases containing thirty 360ml bottles each to 44.13 million case.

The industry's revenue posted an 11 percent increase at 780 billion won. The soju industry has introduced "softer soju" containing least alcohol compared to the existing brands, greatly boosting the consumption of the liquor, which has had reputation of being a strong drink. The new line of products expects to bring at least a 10 percent increase on sales by the end of the year. Whiskey sales, which suffered a 40 percent decrease during the financial crisis, grew 29 percent compared with last year. In contrast, the beer market saw a 0.8 percent decline in sales compared to last year at 1,149 billion won. Though sales started to rise as the temperature began to climb, heavy rainfalls and a typhoon have put a brake on it, marketing the future of the industry dubious for the time being.
